Why do we kiss under the mistletoe?

By Evan Andrews, HTTPS://WWW.HISTORY.COM/NEWS/WHY-DO-WE-KISS-UNDER-THE-MISTLETOE

Kissing under sprigs of mistletoe is a well-known holiday tradition, but this little plant's history as a symbolic herb dates back thousands of years. Many ancient cultures prized mistletoe for its healing properties. The Greeks were known to use it as a cure for everything from menstrual cramps to spleen disorders, and the Roman naturalist Pliny the Elder noted it could be used as a balm against epilepsy, ulcers and poisons. The plant's romantic overtones most likely started with the Celtic Druids of the 1st century A.D. Because mistletoe could blossom even during the frozen winter, the Druids came to view it as a sacred symbol of vivacity, and they administered it to humans and animals alike in the hope of restoring fertility.

Another famous chapter in mistletoe folklore comes from Norse mythology. As the story goes, when the god Odin's son Baldur was prophesied to die, his mother Frigg, the goddess of love, went to all the animals and plants of the natural world to secure an oath that they would not harm him. But Frigg neglected to consult with the unassuming mistletoe, so the scheming god Loki made an arrow from the plant and saw that it was used to kill the otherwise invincible Baldur. According to one sunnier version of the myth, the gods were able to resurrect Baldur from the dead. Delighted, Frigg then declared mistletoe a symbol of love and vowed to plant a kiss on all those who passed beneath it.

Mistletoe's associations with fertility and vitality continued through the Middle Ages, and by the 18th century it had become widely incorporated into Christmas celebrations. Just how it made the jump from sacred herb to holiday decoration remains up for debate, but the kissing tradition appears to have first caught on among servants in England before spreading to the middle classes. As part of the early custom, men were allowed to steal a kiss from any woman caught standing under the mistletoe, and refusing was viewed as bad luck. Yet another tradition instructed the merrymakers to pluck a single berry from the mistletoe with each kiss, and to stop smooching once they were all gone.

Taking Care of Yourself During the Holidays

AREA
OF WESTERN MICHIGAN

We likely all feel it. The underlying stress that comes when entering the holiday season. Typically, this stress comes from overextending ourselves and the hectic pace of holiday commitments. This year has an added anxiety as we work to safely navigate the coronavirus crisis. You are preoccupied with keeping yourself, your family, and your community safe and healthy. This is still, of course, vitally important. But let this be a reminder to take care of yourself too. As a caregiver, you likely could be feeling burnt out and stressed about how to make the holiday season special for your loved one while being unable to take part in the usual traditions. But just because the circumstances surrounding the holidays are changed, doesn't mean we can't still find joy in the season. Our self-care might look a little different, but is still possible. Here are some things you can do as a caregiver to take care of yourself, and in turn, your loved one.

Get connected to resources.

A number of resources exist to provide support to older adults and caregivers during this time. Here are just a few.

- The COVID-19 Senior Support Service provides additional support for older adults and their family caregivers during this crisis through the delivery of essential items and wellness check phone calls. Contact the Area Agency on Aging of Western Michigan (AAAWM) to get started at (616) 456-5664.
- Virtual offerings: Most of our programming at AAWM has transitioned to virtual platforms so you can continue to receive support. This includes our Family Caregiver University, Healthy Aging Program, Dementia Friends, Caregiver Support Group, and Advocates for Senior Issues. You can learn more about each of these programs at <https://www.aaawm.org/senior-resources>.
- Michigan StayWell Counseling. If you are experiencing emotional distress in the context of COVID-19, call the COVID-19 Hotline at 1-888-535-6136 and press "8" to talk to a Michigan Stay Well counselor.

Ask for Help.

When we are caring for a loved one, we often feel like it is a task we must take on our own, not wanting to bother anyone. But more than likely, people are willing to jump in to help, they simply don't know you've been struggling. Reach out to a friend or family member, they might be able to drop off a meal, run an errand, or stay with your loved one for a few hours.

Adapt Traditions.

Some things are certainly off the table, but others can still be done safely. Send out holiday cards via the mail. Bake your favorite holiday-themed dessert and drop it off on your neighbor's doorstep. Watch a beloved holiday movie. There are plenty of ways to still create that special holiday magic and make it an enjoyable season for you and your loved one.

Practice Mindfulness

Recognize and take stock of the good around you. This seems cliché, but the mindset makes all the difference. Try to stay grounded and mindful in the present moment you are in and the things you do have. Recognize that this holiday season is unique and undoubtedly presents its own challenges, but that it won't likely be the norm forever. Therefore, this upcoming holiday season is truly unprecedented, and using this time to try new things could be the perfect change in mindset.

Take Care of Yourself

This could be a more stressful time for you than usual, especially with the many changes, so it is important to remember to take care of yourself. Self-care can take a variety of forms, from moving your body to reading a book.

Take time to do something that you love and that is just for you to enjoy.

If you have questions on further support

True stories about Christmas kindness

The Postman Lifted Us From Depression

My parents, at the height of the Depression, were forced to go on home relief, which is known as welfare today. It was 1935, when I was 10 years old, and we lived on the first floor of a walk-up apartment on 43rd Street, in Brooklyn, New York.

A few days before Christmas, I looked out a kitchen window to see my father sitting on the stoop, dejected and depressed, with tears in his eyes. The mailman was approaching our building and asked my father what was wrong.

I heard my father say that he had used up his food vouchers and that the rent was past due. He had tried to work as a laborer through the Works Progress Administration, but he wasn't a very strong man, and the work had been too hard for him. I was scared, having seen newspaper pictures of people being put out on the street with all their belongings.

"Ike, how much do you need?" the mailman asked. My dad said he needed $33 for the rent, and without hesitation, the mailman took $50 from his wallet and handed it to my father.

My dad said, "I don't know when I'll be able to pay you back." The mailman put an arm around my father and said it would be okay if he paid him back or he didn't pay him back.

The mailman noticed me looking through the window and said, "Isaac, things will not be this way forever. There will be times in the future when someone needs your help. Help them within your means and tell them what happened this day. This will be my paycheck. Merry Christmas and Happy Chanukah."

As long as he lived, my father helped others when he could, and I've done my best to do my part in paying his generosity back.

He Fixed My Car, and My Christmas

In 1958, I was a first-year high school teacher in Beatty, Nevada. On Dec. 22, I headed home to Idaho in my 1951 Hudson to spend Christmas with my parents.

Just south of Fillmore, Utah, a radiator hose broke and the car started to overheat. I hitchhiked into Fillmore and got a ride to a Chevron station. I explained my plight to the owner, Dan Brinkerhoff, who sent a tow truck to bring in my car.

Dan discovered that the engine had become so hot it had warped the head, so he called a nearby wrecking yard and found the needed part. I boarded a Greyhound bus, bought the part and then caught a return bus to Fillmore.

By that time it was dark, and Dan had closed the station. He immediately went to work on my car, laboring for several hours while I slept curled up in the backseat. Finally, he woke me and announced I was ready to go. When I went to settle up, he would not take a dime for anything he had done.

I got to spend the holidays with my parents, and I shall forever remember Dan for the wonderful thing he did for me.

Our Community Came Through

In December 1963, my father gathered my two younger sisters and me together and told us he couldn't afford to give us any presents that year, not even our traditional treats of nuts, apples, oranges, tangerines, and chocolates. My mother had had a stroke the year before and was constantly going to the hospital, so there was no money for Christmas.

On Christmas Eve, we heard a knock on the door. Two ladies came in and gave us new coats, along with some holiday treats. Our neighbor across the street had told her church about our situation, and the people of the congregation wanted to help. I will never forget our kind neighbor.

Christmas Traditions From Around the World

<https://www.holidayextras.co.uk/travel-blog/wanderlust/unusual-christmas-traditions.html>

Last year, we featured Christmas traditions from Ukraine, Iceland, Italy, Austria, and Japan. Here are 5 more Christmas traditions from other countries you may want to incorporate into your holiday celebration.

CZECH REPUBLIC

Christmas Eve in Czech Republic is filled with superstitions. The legs of the dining table are tied with ropes to protect the house from burglary in the next year. Folklore dictates that the first person to leave the table will die before the next Christmas, so all guests try to leave the table at the same time after the celebratory meal. Finally, unmarried Czech women stand with their back to the door and toss one of their shoes over their shoulder. If it lands with the toe facing the door, it means that they'll be married within the year.

GREENLAND

Next time you find yourself complaining about fruitcake, spare a thought for the poor tykes in Greenland. Each Christmas, they traditionally eat mattak – raw whale skin with a little blubber – and kiviak, which is made by wrapping an auk (a small arctic bird) in seal skin, burying it for several months and eating its decomposed flesh.

VENEZUELA

In the week leading up to Christmas, Venezuelans attend a daily church service called Misa de Aguinaldo (Early Morning Mass). In the capital city, Caracas, it is customary to travel to the church service on roller skates. Indeed, so widespread is the practice, many roads in the capital are closed until 8 AM to provide Christmas worshippers with a safe passage.

PORTUGAL

A dinner set for the dead may sound more like something from Halloween, but this is Christmas in Portugal. During consoda, their traditional Christmas feast, families sometimes set extra places at the dining table for deceased relatives. It's thought that the practice will ensure good fortunes for the household. In some areas, crumbs are left on the hearth as well. And you thought feeding all your living relatives was hard enough.

SPAIN

Welcome to the bizarre Catalan tradition of caga tió or 'defecating log'. Locals in Catalonia, Spain, create a character out of a hollow log by drawing a face on it and giving it a hat. They then spend 2 weeks 'feeding' it fruit, nuts, and sweets while keeping it under a blanket. The nurtured piece of lumber should produce presents if cared for properly.

On Christmas Eve, the entire family beats the log with sticks and sings a traditional song that translates to 'if you don't defecate well, I'll beat you with a stick' until the log 'excretes' all its treats and presents. It's hard to comprehend why this tradition hasn't caught on elsewhere.

Scottville Senior Center closes in-center activities again due to COVID

To protect the health of everyone affiliated with the Scottville Area Senior Center, we reluctantly decided to close our in-center activities again in November, after only being open for a few weeks.

We expect this temporary closure to last at least until the end of the year.

We're very sorry but the latest COVID news became progressively more threatening during the two weeks we were open.

We will re-evaluate at the end of the year to see if we can re-open once again. This will be determined by the trend in positive cases and hospitalizations, as well as progress toward availability of a vaccine.

Soon after we closed in-center activities in November, as COVID cases continued to rise sharply, the Governor announced new statewide restrictions to limit the spread of the virus. So we took the further protective step of temporarily suspending our county-wide in-home and transportation services. These will be re-started as soon as possible. Please call the center (757-4705) for the current status of programs.

We have reverted to our previous methods of serving our senior population—food box distribution, plus help and information via phone, email and social media. Since the weather is now too cold for outdoor classes, we also plan to institute online programs for exercise and group meetings, replacing the programs we previously did at Riverside Park.

We were very sorry to have to take these steps, but the surge in COVID cases in West Michigan during November heightened the risk to unacceptable levels.

For Good. For Ever.

Bequests Support Senior Programs in Perpetuity

The Community Foundation for Mason County has such a lovely phrase for bequest gifts, which are so deeply appreciated by non-profit organizations: “For Good. For Ever.”

The Scottville Area Senior Center was recently informed that an endowment fund had been established at the Community Foundation through a bequest gift from Geri Rohrmoser, Scottville native, active community member, and friend of the senior center.

Proceeds earned by this generous gift will enhance the SASC Senior Services Improvement Fund. This fund is a source of support for the center’s many programs and activities, like the Grandparents Raising Grandchildren/Kinship Caregivers program.

According to the Community Foundation, Geri let it be known that she found the Scottville Senior Center very welcoming in her later years and wanted to give back to support that same opportunity for others.

Another exceptional feature of Geri’s kind gift is that the fund it created is an open invitation to others who may want to help it grow with their own donations. It offers a means of supporting the center’s many programs, which include county-wide in-home services, medical transportation for seniors, and providing an inviting social gathering venue.

Farewell...and Welcome

This is a bittersweet holiday season for us at SASC. We said fond farewell to our activities coordinator, Rhonda Remer, but had the good fortune to welcome our new coordinator, Mellissa (Missy) Kissell.

Rhonda recently earned her license as a licensed practical nurse (LPN), for which she had studied diligently while working here. Once she had her license her skills made her a very attractive candidate and she soon joined the nursing staff at MediLodge of Ludington. When COVID caused us to suspend in-center activities this summer, Rhonda creatively organized programs at the Riverside Park pavilion.

Missy has helped the center in many volunteer ways, especially her superb work as one of the organizers of our Grandparents Raising Grandchildren/Kinship Caregivers program. Now she will also lead the other senior center activities, plus be the lead for SASC on this newsletter—a collaborative project of the four senior centers in Mason County.

Like Rhonda, Missy has the team spirit to pitch in on anything that needs to be done help serve Mason County seniors. Many will also recognize Missy as the staff leader at Kilwin's in downtown Ludington.

Our regret at losing Rhonda to her excellent new career opportunity is softened by our excitement in welcoming Missy as a great addition to the team!

-Bill Kerans, SASC director

SENIOR SAFETY: 5 TIPS TO GET YOUR CAR READY FOR WINTER

As we head into winter, it's time to make sure our homes and cars are ready. Even if you don't drive your vehicle very often, it's still important to make sure it's in shape for the cold and snowy months ahead. Failing to do so might leave you stranded by the side of the road or with a car in the garage that has a dead battery and won't start.

While most people know they need a good quality ice scraper and a pair of heavy gloves to keep in the car, there's more to getting ready for winter. Here are 5 tips to help your winter preparedness efforts.

1. Schedule an oil change and checkup

While this might seem pretty basic, it's easy to overlook having an oil change when you don't log many miles on your car each year. Schedule an appointment at your local dealership or service center.

Let them know you'd like the mechanic to change the oil and conduct a few other maintenance items, such as:

- Check and top off fluids, including anti-freeze, power steering fluid, and windshield washer fluid.
- Look at the wiper blades and replace, if needed.
- Check the air filter and change, if needed.

2. Inspect the tread and condition of tires

The snowy, slippery roads of winter make tires an important part of your vehicle's safe operation. When you take your car in for its checkup, ask the mechanic to check the treads on the tires.

They may recommend rotating or even replacing the tires.

You can also keep an eye on the treads throughout the winter with this simple test: Place a penny into several tire treads, making sure Lincoln's head is upside down.

If you can see most of Lincoln's head, it's a good bet the treads are worn and you probably need new tires.

3. Monitor tire Pressure

Winter can cause tire pressure to fluctuate, so you'll need to monitor it often. If your vehicle doesn't automatically do this for you, invest in a good quality tire gauge. Store it in your glove box for easy access. It's more convenient than trying to use one at the gas station when the weather is bad.

If you aren't sure how much pressure your tires need (it's different for every vehicle), look for a sticker on the driver-side doorjamb. You can usually find it listed there. If not, check your owner's manual or manufacturer's website. These tips on checking tire pressure from the automotive experts at Edmund's might be useful, too.

4. Invest in a Lock De icer

It's no fun trying to unlock your car door, only to find it frozen shut. Pick up a few cans of de icer to keep on hand.

Just remember not to store them in your car! If the locks are frozen, you won't be able to access them. Stash a can near the door to your garage, as well as another in your pocket or purse.

5. Put together an emergency bag

Winterizing your car should also include packing a winter weather bag in case you experience a roadside emergency. A few items to include in your emergency kit include:

- Blankets
- Boots
- Water or sports drink
- Non-perishable snacks
- Flashlight and batteries
- Battery-powered emergency radio
- Battery-powered cell phone charger

One last suggestion is to explore local transportation programs and ride sharing services. If you aren't comfortable driving on a cold winter's day but need to get out to an appointment or for groceries, knowing there are other options available is essential.

As many of you know Cyndi Scott has retired and moved back to the Rockford area to be near her children and grandchildren. It is with a heavy heart we say good-bye. Cyndi brought sunshine, compassion, positive thinking and a great need to make our community a better place. Cyndi was hired into the Ludington Senior Center eleven years ago where she was given the position of Receptionist. In my seven years of knowing her she grew to be much more than a receptionist. Her vision of what we could do and what we were able to accomplish was nothing but inspiring. She created a Stretch, Balance and Fit Exercise Class that she conducted on a weekly basis. Her attendance grew to over 40 participants per session. She taught the Matter of Balance Educational Class to provide seniors with knowledge on how to prevent falls. Cyndi also entertained many of us with her beautiful voice at all our special events. We are blessed, for Cyndi cannot walk away from her love of the center and our participants. She will continue providing her exercise class via zoom. Just call the center and share your email address to participate in her zoom class. You will receive an invitation and link to participate in her classes.

Vickie Collins

SUPPORT GROUPS LISTED BELOW MAY CURRENTLY CANCELED. PLEASE CALL AHEAD BEFORE PLANNING TO ATTEND.

Being in a support group can also help you develop new skills to relate to others. In addition, the members of the group who have the same problems can support each other and may suggest new ways of dealing with a particular problem.

When joining a support group, you may be uncomfortable at first when it comes time to discuss problems in front of strangers. However, the fact that others are facing the same type of situation may help you open up and discuss your feelings. In addition, everything that takes place within the support group should be kept confidential.
